Customer Identity Verification

Before any account change

Before looking up or changing an account, confirm two things: the email address on the account and the account number. If either does not match, do not reveal whether the account exists.

Acting for someone else

An account can only be changed by the person it belongs to. Staff do not act on a customer's account based on a request from a third party.

Failed verification

After a failed verification, offer a human support option. Do not retry guesses.

Synthetic, fictional policy for a demonstration. Document key: identity-verification.
