Refund Review Rules

No automatic refunds

The support assistant and automated workflows never issue refunds. They can open a billing review. Only the billing team can approve a refund for processing.

Approval threshold

A billing review for a charge over $50.00 needs a team member's approval before it is opened. Reviews for charges of $50.00 or less may be opened once the customer confirms.

Who decides

A billing review is decided by the billing team. Support staff and the AI assistant cannot approve, reject, speed up or predict the outcome of a review.

What to tell customers

Only after the billing system confirms that a review exists, tell the customer that a review has been opened and that the billing team will decide. Until then, say plainly that no review has been opened yet and explain what happens next. Never say that money has been returned until the billing system shows it, and never say that opening a review will produce a refund.

Synthetic, fictional policy for a demonstration. Document key: refund-review-rules.